FOREWORD

Historicity of the sources in their deterministic mood highlights the present and future course of events which are evaluated in the accepted patterns of life to make the man more learned and aware. This is the second nature of man that he learns more from the traditions and the social experience of life to make the world easier for living and providing the generation a reflecting sense to meet the challenges of their coming life. Searching, collection, arranging of the material, particularly archival sources, is itself a herculean task which infuse the spirit of knowing for the recognition of self and others. In this regard the first duty is to preserve it and present it to others.

In the history of the Subcontinent, the tradition of establishing an indigenous pattern of understanding the societal dynamics had been visualized by different historians and administrative officials like Jones, Metcalf and Elphinstone. Sir William Jones is one of the forerunners from whom an inspiration is drawn for the present project. William Jones in the 18th century observed the Indian society and was charmed by old literature and ancient wisdom. He tried to harmonize modern developments with that of the ancient history on the bases of nature and reason. He thought about the importance of history as a philosophy based on the accumulated experience and wisdom of all ages and all nations than merely a sort of knowledge to collect examples from the human past.

William Jones saw history in the form of rise and fall of civilizations, embodied in arts, crafts, literature and institutions. However, he studied the development and progress of human civilization through the study of history of racial mythology. On this ground, he treats ancient Hebrew, Arabic, Greek, Roman, Italian, Indian, Chinese, and Persian literature and mythology. As all ancient literature forms some sort of religious belief and moral system, so Jones had a strong belief in the wisdom and strength of the ancient religions and moral systems by which he established the discipline of 'Indology'.

This project methodologically followed more or less the same pattern to highlight the features of the British India. The Britishers projected each and every aspect of Indian life by establishing the pattern of empirical research and strengthened the institutions for the uplift of general behavior according to the modern developments. One way of preserving and presenting these sources of history is the preparation of bibliography of collecting material. Bibliography and notes on the classified sources are generally arranged for the extension and dissemination of knowledge. It is consisted of archival documents of the Commissioner and the Deputy Commissioner offices of Multan before and after partition of the Subcontinent. Its effectiveness will be proved more valuable for the generations by the judgments of the epistemic foundations which will be laid down by the progeny of this area. Inquisitive nature of the academia and researcher envisions themselves to see the social process normatively and empirically by the study of these sources. It will help more to the intellectuals, academicians, researchers and other community people to construct the social and political history of their areas accordingly.

Punjab has its historical importance through the ages due to its geographical position, being so near to the North-West frontier of the Indian Subcontinent. The Punjab was ruled over by the successive conquerors, attacked India through its historic gate—the Khyber Pass. In 1020s Mahmud of Ghazna added Peshawar, Multan, Lahore, Kangra and Thanesar to his dominions. He made Lahore a province of his empire. In the year 1186AD the Punjab was taken over by the Ghoris. After Ghoris, the Punjab came under the Turkish and Afghan sultan's of Delhi—commonly known as the Sultanate period. Punjab also passed under the Mongol's invasions but it retained its peace and good government during Mughal period. The Mughal Empire included the 'subhas' of Lahore, Multan and Delhi. Punjab after annexation to British Empire rose to the full rank of an Indian province in 1859. Multan also underwent the same kind of changes and acquired the status of central seat in different times. It became the dependent unit and functioned as a Division of Punjab province in the British period. The area of Multan has remained a center for the convergence of different civilizations i.e. Indus Valley civilization, Greek civilization, Muslim civilization and the British civilization that has given it a primacy in our thrust to draw the contours of this area.

This project of 'Multan Regional Studies Specialization' is finalized by the documentation of official sources into their categories. With the compartmentalization of various disciplines, specialization of different areas i.e. 'Area Studies' has also got high importance. In continuation of the same, we intended to initiate 'Multan Regional Studies Specialization'. This area study programme has been articulated specifically for the region of Multan, which has its own historical and cultural traditions. This programme is comprehensive in its nature and outlook, designed for exploring the internal dynamics of social evolution of the society of this region. Underlying currents of societal disposition are as an innate idea, which will be identified by modern research methods and techniques that could be a part of this programme to follow-up. The programme of regional studies covers a comprehensive outline of the history, culture, languages, literature, politics, economy, archeology, ethnography and geography of the area.

This activity of making bibliography of archives is a part of the project entitled "Multan Regional Studies Specialization" awarded to the Department of Pakistan Studies by Higher Education Commission of Pakistan and the British Council of Pakistan. Under this project certain steps are taken by the team of the project including the development of five courses on the region of Multan, preparation of the relevant manual of scheme of studies and finally the establishment of library, based on the collection of official documents and archives. These sources are relevant more for the project 'Multan Regional Studies' and as well for the Punjab which has been taken up by the Department of Pakistan Studies with the collaboration of the Department of History, Royal Holloway College, University of London.

The Department of Pakistan Studies, Bahauddin Zakariya University, Multan, took an initiative to shoulder the responsibility of arranging the material collected from the District Coordination Officer (Before the reforms of 2001, it was Deputy Commissioner Office). The Department of Pakistan Studies is very much indebted in this regard to the Executive District Officer-Finance, Mr. Javed Iqbal and to the Office of District Coordination Officer Multan. They helped us in establishing this library by donating the official archival record (1852-2004) in the form of primary sources. The Vice-Chancellor, Bahauddin Zakariya University Multan, Professor Dr. Muhammad Zafarullah has greased this process by dispensing every kind of material and moral help which was felt as necessary. Now the Department has taken this onerous as a public trustee, and has laid down the foundation of exploration of the area of Multan and other areas as well. This project has made the prototype of regional studies which could be followed for further studies of the other regions of Pakistan.

This project is based on the joint efforts of foreign link partner, Royal Holloway College, University of London and indigenous institution, the Department of Pakistan Studies, Bahauddin Zakariya University Multan under patronage and support of Higher Education Commission of Pakistan and British Council of Pakistan. All the collections passed through the stages of its development from preservation, binding, spanning and classification to cataloguing. All this has been arranged on the pattern of National Documentation Centre (NDC) Islamabad and chronological order has been observed in the preparation of this bibliographical document.

In this project exchange visits of faculty members between the Department of Pakistan Studies and the Department of History Royal Holloway College, University of London were main focus to enrich the research potential of teachers, researchers and that of students. This activity was more beneficial for the Faculty of Pakistan Studies to take guidance from the Department of History, Royal Holloway College, University of London in the fields of oral research, archeology and collecting artifacts. We are very grateful to Professor Francis Robinson, Dr Sarah Ansari and Dr. Graham Smith to offer their unconditional services for the development of this unique project. They helped the visiting faculty members in studying and collecting the documents from the Indian Office Record, British Library London and had been made the substantive part of this library. We are also thankful to Ms. Uzma Saddiqi and Mr. Hasan Saddiqi of the British Council in providing material and moral support at the development of each step of this project.

Azra Asghar Ali,
Principal Link Coordinator of the Project.
